FEBRUARY 2025

CELEBRATING BLACK LIBRARIANS

In celebration of Black History Month, our Learning Resource Center is proud to present an ongoing program throughout the month of February, recognizing librarian pioneers who have made significant contributions to the field of library science and information access.

This year's theme, "African Americans in Labor," as set by the Association for the Study of African American Life and History (ASALH), invites us to explore the often-overlooked contributions of African Americans in the workforce. Our program will showcase famous African American librarian pioneers throughout the Learning Resource Center, highlighting their groundbreaking work and dedication to advancing the profession and empowering their communities. From advocating for access to information in underserved areas to preserving African American history and culture, these pioneers have shaped the way we think about learning and resource spaces as centers of education, equality, and opportunity. By honoring their legacy this February, we continue to inspire future generations to pursue careers in librarianship and embrace the power of information in shaping society.
